From cracking down on sanctuary cities that protect undocumented immigrants to revoking electric vehicle mandates, President Trump's Inauguration Day priorities set up conflicts with a number of California policies, including immigration and the environment, spurring quick reaction from state Democratic leaders poised to fend off the impacts of a second Trump era.

Trump signed more than 100 executive orders, including declaring a national emergency at the southern border, stopping all illegal entries there, ending birthright citizenship and returning "millions and millions of criminal aliens back to the places from which they came," he said during his 30-minute inaugural address inside the Capitol rotunda Monday.

Trump's Day 1 actions included rescinding 78 executive orders of the departed Biden Administration on border enforcement and

President says his new term will be a 'golden age' for all

By Peter Baker
The New York Times

WASHINGTON » Donald John Trump completed an extraordinary return to power Monday as he was sworn in as the 47th president of the United States and promised an immediate blitz of actions to begin drastically changing the course of the country and usher in a new "golden age of America."

In a triumph of the man and his movement, Trump took the oath of office during a ceremony in the Capitol four years after he was evicted by voters, reinvigorated for another term aimed at remaking America in his vision. He wasted no time outlining an ambitious program of often divisive policies to "reclaim our Republic" and purge its enemies and his own.

"My recent election is a mandate to completely and totally reverse a horrible betrayal and all of these many betrayals that have taken place, and to give the people back their faith, their wealth, their democracy and, indeed,
