TRUMP WINS BIG IN IOWA'S REPUBLICAN CAUCUSES

DeSantis edges Haley for second place as race turns to N.H.

DON CAMPBELL

WASHINGTON, Iowa

Former President Donald Trump scored a decisive win in the Iowa caucuses on Monday, giving him the votes he needs to take the nomination. Trump's success was overwhelming, with the vast majority of the 762,000 votes cast going to him. He won with a margin of victory exceeding the nearly 13 percent- point lead that he had previously predicted he needed to win the nomination.

The victory, called by The Associated Press on Monday, is a key moment in Trump's quest to return to the White House. On Monday, he addressed the nearly 1,300 Iowa Republicans who had previously voted for him in the Iowa caucuses. He stressed the importance of the result, saying it represents a historic potential re-match with the winner, it was not yet clear if he would win an outright majority.

The result was a setback for Sen. Bernie Sanders, who was expected to be the next big story in the Iowa caucuses. Sanders had hoped to gain ground in the race, but he lost his second-place finish with a margin of victory exceeding the nearly 13 percent-points that both Biden and Sanders had previously predicted he needed to win the nomination.

The victory, called by The Associated Press on Monday, is a key moment in Trump's quest to return to the White House. On Monday, he addressed the nearly 1,300 Iowa Republicans who had previously voted for him in the Iowa caucuses. He stressed the importance of the result, saying it represents a historic potential re-match with the winner, it was not yet clear if he would win an outright majority.

In Iowa, the campaign has been focused on winning the support of rural voters, who are traditionally more likely to support Trump. With this victory, Trump has demonstrated his ability to appeal to these voters, and he has also shown his ability to take advantage of the Democratic Party's internal divisions, which have made it difficult for the party to unite behind a single candidate.

Trump's victory is also a major win for the Republican Party, which has struggled to win in Iowa in recent years. The win is a major boost for Trump's campaign, and it has given him a strong momentum heading into the next round of primaries.

The result was a setback for Sen. Bernie Sanders, who was expected to be the next big story in the Iowa caucuses. Sanders had hoped to gain ground in the race, but he lost his second-place finish with a margin of victory exceeding the nearly 13 percent-points that both Biden and Sanders had previously predicted he needed to win the nomination.

The victory, called by The Associated Press on Monday, is a key moment in Trump's quest to return to the White House. On Monday, he addressed the nearly 1,300 Iowa Republicans who had previously voted for him in the Iowa caucuses. He stressed the importance of the result, saying it represents a historic potential re-match with the winner, it was not yet clear if he would win an outright majority.

In Iowa, the campaign has been focused on winning the support of rural voters, who are traditionally more likely to support Trump. With this victory, Trump has demonstrated his ability to appeal to these voters, and he has also shown his ability to take advantage of the Democratic Party's internal divisions, which have made it difficult for the party to unite behind a single candidate.

Trump's victory is also a major win for the Republican Party, which has struggled to win in Iowa in recent years. The win is a major boost for Trump's campaign, and it has given him a strong momentum heading into the next round of primaries.

In Iowa, the campaign has been focused on winning the support of rural voters, who are traditionally more likely to support Trump. With this victory, Trump has demonstrated his ability to appeal to these voters, and he has also shown his ability to take advantage of the Democratic Party's internal divisions, which have made it difficult for the party to unite behind a single candidate.

Trump's victory is also a major win for the Republican Party, which has struggled to win in Iowa in recent years. The win is a major boost for Trump's campaign, and it has given him a strong momentum heading into the next round of primaries.