CONFUSION GROWS IN TIJUANA AS TITLE 42 REMAINS IN EFFECT

Asylum seekers at port of entry disappointed by news that Title 42 is not over

A Honduran woman, her four children and a 1-year-old grandchild dropped off a sidewalk near the San Ysidro Port of Entry on Tuesday morning.

The woman, who has already spent about six months in Tijuana, and her husband claimed that Title 42 should be lifted so that she and her family can reach U.S. ports of entry.

Title 42, which went into effect at the beginning of the pandemic, was supposed to end this week under a judge’s order in a case brought by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) of Southern California.

The order is expected to be released in full to the House Jan. 6 committee, which is expected to release its conclusions on Wednesday. It will also be released to the public on Thursday.

The two projected a united front at the White House, and both men issued rebukes of Russia as they sought to rally support for sending more weapons to Ukraine.
