Amid the fog of war, reading Nasrallah’s lips

His speech could change direction of war; U.S. cooperation bodes well for day after day

Almost four weeks into the nightmare of the Gaza war, which still threatens to escalate into a full-scale regional war, it feels like we have to pinch ourselves to make sure that this is truly the new reality. The change brought by the war is so vast, in terms of life and death, in mutations, in the country’s agenda and in the international reaction, that it creates an almost surreal world that is very difficult to imagine. From every possible angle, the war in Gaza is already longer than the Yom Kippur War, to which it is often compared. And as opposed to that war, which still threatens to expand into an even broader regional war, it feels like we’re reading the earlier stages of a war for survival. That is, unlike the Yom Kippur War, where the main confrontation was between the Egyptian army and the Israeli forces, the war in Gaza is between the Israeli military and the civilian population. This war is a war for the survival of the Israeli state, and for the survival of the Israeli people.

I knew all of them personally. The interceptors not only targeted the missiles fired from Yemen, but also showed that this is a war of survival. That Анім Харел

Three soldiers killed in Gaza

Amos Harel

An Israeli tank firing in the Gaza Strip on Thursday.

Yom Kippur War, to which it is often compared. And as opposed to that war, which still threatens to expand into an even broader regional war, it feels like we’re reading the earlier stages of a war for survival. That is, unlike the Yom Kippur War, where the main confrontation was between the Egyptian army and the Israeli forces, the war in Gaza is between the Israeli military and the civilian population. This war is a war for the survival of the Israeli state, and for the survival of the Israeli people.

I knew all of them personally. The interceptors not only targeted the missiles fired from Yemen, but also showed that this is a war of survival. That

Yom Kippur War, to which it is often compared. And as opposed to that war, which still threatens to expand into an even broader regional war, it feels like we’re reading the earlier stages of a war for survival. That is, unlike the Yom Kippur War, where the main confrontation was between the Egyptian army and the Israeli forces, the war in Gaza is between the Israeli military and the civilian population. This war is a war for the survival of the Israeli state, and for the survival of the Israeli people.

I knew all of them personally. The interceptors not only targeted the missiles fired from Yemen, but also showed that this is a war of survival. That